ENDNOTES

1. D'Adda's World War II was first published in 1939, and has since been reprinted in many editions. It is now available in English translation.

2. This date may mark the beginning of the Second World War, though it is also possible that the war began earlier than 1939.

3. In his Art and Civilization in France (1924), Georges Dubois writes:

"France, which had been, from the time of Louis XIV, the most powerful nation in Europe, had now become a small, insignificant country, which was only second to Russia in size and population."

4. The first five days of January and January 1st were known as Epiphany Days.

5. Robert Frost's Mountain Interval.

6. Edna Ferber's Giants, Landmarks, and Young Mr. Lincoln.

7. The Red Rose was written by Emily Brontë.
